It brings me joy to see other people succeed. So I started writing blog posts that were about very practical things like this is actually how you clock in on a unit and how you physically take care of five people at once. That turned into a successful blog, which turned into a book. Then that turned into a podcast and now I'm creating courses for nurses.

So making that master step was something I knew I needed to do. I just had no idea practically how it would happen. And then I found Capella University.

I honestly would not have started my Master's if FlexPath was not an option. I want to give as much as I can to my husband, my kids, my family, my job. So I would look at my calendar and say, my goal is to have this done on this day, this day, this day. So much more customized to me.

Those classes that I had experience with, I could progress through them a little faster. As soon as I got done with one class, I could go to the next one. I didn't have to wait, and I can be much more efficient with my time. [Music]

With my Master's degree, I feel so much more qualified to create curriculum for new nurses. For those of you that are looking at continuing your education, I encourage you to look at Capella's FlexPath. It worked really well for me to help me live and learn. [Music]
