This journey has been amazing. It's been an experience that I can say I've loved from beginning to end. My son is now five, I am pregnant. I'm due in two and a half weeks. But I did it and I got my MBA.

Now that I've earned my Master's degree I feel more highly qualified as a teacher in the classroom and I feel more confident in my abilities as an educator. I knew I wanted to earn my Master's in Education and once I came across the FlexPath format from Capella I knew that it was going to offer the flexibility I needed.

[Michelle's FlexPath goals]

I just started my MEd or Master's of Education with Capella University in September and I am loving it so far.

[A new year with Michelle]

And I only have nine courses left which means I'm getting close.

[Michelle's Capstone]

I am so excited to announce that I'm officially in my capstone yay which is my final course for grad school.

This degree opened my eyes to so many perspectives and components of education that I was not overly knowledgeable about before I started my program.

[3 Things Michelle has applied to her classroom]

I truly feel like my teaching has drastically improved as a result of the research I've done through my Master's program and that is such a great feeling because I know my students are benefiting.

I would do FlexPath again in a heartbeat because I don't think I would have been successful with a traditional program. FlexPath was everything I thought it would be and more.
